Synopsis

Using the pioneering technique of the pinhole camera to construct captivating representations of space and architecture, the German-American artist, Vera Lutter reinvents the medium of photography and enters into a discourse on the condition of an image by generating a new approach to both time and space. This catalogue represents a rich body of photographic work, realized by the artist from 1994-2004: from a spectacular series depicting means of transportation to troubled visions of metropolitan spaces through to the intriguing series of industrial interiors, abandoned factories and run-down spaces.
