' Thirty, a member of the court that examined before the ambassador said Rosa M<sup>a</sup> Boceta ago . These quotes highlight not only a socially rooted thought , but protected by law in our country until 1981, when the full legal equality between men and women was reached. However , during that time many rose against marginalization. They were true pioneers who paved the way fighting mostly in solitude and to the general incomprehension. Lafuente Isaiah tells his story in this libro.La Spanish struggle for equality. Just over a century, a professor at the Central University of Madrid Maria Elena snapped Maseras , the first Spanish university :I do not want doctors skirts !. Thirty, a member of the court that examined before the ambassador said Maria Rosa Boceta ago :While I am in this court there will be a diplomatic women in Spain !. These and similar phrases highlight not only a legally protected but socially rooted in our country for decades thought: was not until 1981 that the full legal equality between men and women was reached. Ie before yesterday. However , during that time many women stood up against marginalization . They were pioneers who refused to resign authentic -looking that offered a society that considered second class citizens . Thanks to their efforts , sometimes paid with imprisonment or life, they opened the way for equality fighting alone and almost always before the imcomprension of men and women . Medical Ordóñez has diagnosed diabetes . This phrase , so common today was unthinkable in the mid nineteenth century. Women , relegated to the background , considered second-class citizens , have been revealed over the last century and a half to achieve both social equality as a professional who has been denied throughout history.
